MINISTRY PHILOSOPHY

I desire to use and refine my creative, managerial and relational skills, spiritual gifts, and passion for excellence to enhance the overall mission and vision of a ministry. I love to teach and to pastor, and it is my desire to minister to people in both the easy and hard times they experience. I treasure the opportunity to counsel, perform weddings and funerals, and execute other pastoral responsibilities. I am very passionate about intentional, measured discipleship programs where church members are equipped and then moved into areas to serve on a regular basis, and hope to help refine and support such a program in a church. My heart is to serve the community through efforts that both serve people's needs and present the gospel in a compelling way. I hope to be a part of a ministry that is boldly drawing people into the family of Christ. I love married life, and hope to play a key role in preparing people for marriage, as well as encouraging and equipping married men and women in their current relationships.

PERSONAL BACKGROUND

- Childhood: I was raised in a Christian home as part of a holiness church tradition since my birth. My mother and father were excellent examples of good parenting and Christian moral values. They supported me and taught me to live a disciplined, moral life.
- Conversion: I connected with the gospel message when I was eleven. I clearly understood the fact that my sin was separating me from God, and I desired to have a relationship with Him more than anything. I prayed to receive Christ at Easter—and was propelled into a dynamic relationship with Him, reading, praying, and journaling from that early age.
- Calling: In high school my desire to pursue soccer and relationships created tension in my relationship with Christ. That tension led me to a place where I felt a clear calling upon my life to pursue the work of the ministry. When I began considering my career path, the only thing that really thrilled me was working alongside the Lord as He changed lives.
- Marriage: Stacy and I have been married since 2004. She is my college sweetheart and my best friend as well as a very intelligent, hard-working co-laborer with me in the ministry. She has a passion for developing others which encourages and equips me in my ministry.
- Interests: I am a disciplined athlete. I enjoy a regular running and biking schedule, and I enter Triathlon competitions on a regular basis. I am a technical geek, who enjoys working with computers in every respect. I never ask IT for help, because I am the IT help at the majority of my jobs.
